With a solid academic foundation and workplace ready students, Flinders placements are looking good.

Flinders University is committed to providing a student-centred, innovative, supportive and high quality learning experience.

For students, placements develop work-ready skills. For employers, taking part in a student placement offers benefits that go well beyond providing a foundation for tomorrow’s professionals.

Student placements can assist your heavily committed teams. They allow you to assess potential employees, contribute to your community engagement goals, and foster long term research collaboration with the University.

Flinders Law School brings the best of academic practice together with real world applications. Placements provide Justice & Society and Criminal Justice students with the opportunity to apply their legal, philosophical and social sciences skills, and knowledge of the relationships between justice, law and society, to the workplace.

Our students are well prepared for a work placement in their third year (Justice & Society), Honours year (Criminal Justice), having undertaken a comprehensive in-house process that includes work-readiness; and occupational health, safety and well-being.
