Responsibility for depositing papers

The Chief Investigator A (CIA) on any given grant will be responsible for providing the publication metadata (ie – journal name, title, author list, volume, issue, page numbers etc) and, as and when it becomes available, the appropriate copy of the publication to the institutional repository (although this may be managed via the institutional research administration office). This is independent of the CIA’s authorship role (first, last or middle) on a given paper.

Publication metadata

Publication metadata (ie – journal name, title, author list, volume, issue, page numbers etc) must be submitted to the institutional repository as soon as possible after the paper is accepted for publication, no matter when (or if) the paper itself will become openly accessible.

Acceptable versions

Both the author’s version of the article (Word document) after peer-review, with revisions having been made and the publisher’s version (e.g. journal version with final pagination and formatting) are acceptable under this revised policy.

Journals may have different policies regarding what version of a manuscript or article can be made available, and timing of this availability. This information should be included in any copyright/licensing agreement.

FAC staff can assist in checking publishers’ copyright agreements and advise on the appropriate version to deposit.

Depositing papers to the FAC

Even if you are not required to deposit your paper in order to comply with NHMRC policy, there are other reasons to consider doing so:

- Visibility — material in institutional repositories is ranked higher in search engine results
- Stability — each paper in the FAC receives a unique, permanent link
- Preservation — a secure and long term archive for your scholarly work.
