Flinders University School of Medicine
Curriculum for the next generation: Building on strengths for a new future.

Curriculum Conference 2011

Flinders University School of Medicine invites YOU to participate in the 2011 Curriculum Conference being held on October 24 and 25 in McLaren Vale.

Come for a day, come for an hour, come for dinner BUT do come and share with us your ideas to improve our medical course.

Why? Because we need to maintain our pre-eminence and strength as a medical course: THAT inspires innovation, high quality research and leadership in medical education; THAT reflects the diversity of its people, its teaching sites, its students; THAT builds supportive communities, enhances educational opportunities and student experience; THAT values quality teaching, continuous improvement and commitments to excellence.

What? A two-day interactive, strategic thinkfest THAT builds on our strengths to take us in to the next decade and beyond – 2014 to 2024.

How? Engage with a range of challenging ideas developed by task groups examining curriculum redesign, pathways to medicine, integration and diversity, research and community engagement and clinical teaching - new ways to achieve clinical immersion.

When? Monday October 24th and Tuesday October 25th (including Conference Dinner with Guest Speaker on Monday evening).

RSVP essential - Please contact:
Andrea Scott 08 8204 6641 or andrea.scott@flinders.edu.au to book your place at this IMPORTANT event.

Guest Speaker: Professor David Hirsh, Waterman Fellow for 2011 - “New Ways of Conceiving Clinical Education”