

The Margaret Brown Prize for Contribution to a Rural Community Nomination form

Flinders University Rural and Remote Health South Australia (FRRHSA) annually awards The Margaret Brown Prize, to a graduating Doctor of Medicine (MD) domestic student who has made a significant contribution to a South Australian (SA) rural community outside of their medical course curriculum requirements and have completed a rural SA placement. The prize is named in honour of Margaret Brown, (AO) who has had significant involvement in rural community engagement and provided strong advocacy for rural health.

Nominations for the prize are sought from students, members of the teaching staff and members of South Australian rural communities.

Each nomination must include a statement of no more than 400 words describing the student's voluntary contribution to a rural community outside of their course requirements, and the name of a referee who can testify to the accuracy of the nomination statement.
