

2020 short course

COMMUNITY ARCHAEOLOGY FIELD SCHOOL

Taught in a collaboration between Aboriginal Elders and Flinders University staff, this short course will teach participants how to undertake ethical and culturally sensitive research with Aboriginal peoples.

When it's run

21-27 September 2020

Cost

$1,100 (inc. GST)

Registration

Pay online

Mode of delivery

Barunga Aboriginal Community,
Northern Territory, Australia

Course content

This short course will teach participants how to undertake ethical and culturally sensitive research in remote Aboriginal communities. Under the guidance of Barunga community members and Aboriginal Elders, this field school provides a unique opportunity for learning and personal growth while sharing daily life with Aboriginal Australians.

The themes for this topic are:

- Rock art and cultural landscapes
- Heritage, health and wellbeing
- The sophistication of Aboriginal social systems
- Aboriginal people in the modern world.

More information at:

<https://barungafieldschool.com>

Learning outcomes

The major aims of the topic are to help students develop skills used in Indigenous fieldwork such as inter-cultural communication, rock art recording, site recording, and oral histories.

In 2020, the focus of the field school is likely to be rock art, modern material culture, the cemetery, oral histories, and Indigenous health and wellbeing.

Who should attend?

Students from any discipline interested in learning about working with Aboriginal people. Since the main focus is on heritage, health and wellbeing this topic is particularly suited to students studying archaeology, medicine and public health and nursing and health sciences.

Assessment

Successful completion of the Community Archaeology Field School comprises of a blog (15%), field journal (15%), field test (10%), community report (40%) and teamwork (20%).

Disclaimer

Every effort has been made to ensure the information in this publication is accurate at the time of publication. Information regarding this course, the course fees, and the content is subject to change. Please refer to our website for up-to-date information. Thank you.