GOING BEYOND STARTS WITH THINKING BEYOND

Careers are evolving and the workplace and industries of the future will look very different from today’s.

That’s why we offer a suite of innovation and enterprise electives and courses to prepare you for the careers of tomorrow.

Powered by the Fox School of Business, a US top ten business school for entrepreneurship*, and our very own New Venture Institute, these electives will help you to develop what we like to call ‘personal enterprise skills’.

These are the skills that employers are looking for. From critical thinking, to problem solving and creativity, and understanding how disruptive technology will impact the world around us, you will become equipped with the ability to adapt to whatever life throws at you, personally and professionally.

Whether you’d like to include innovation electives in your degree or make it your focus, you can customise the program to suit your needs.

A WORD FROM INDUSTRY

“Flinders University has developed a reputation for providing more fieldwork opportunities than other Australian universities. As a result, graduates from Flinders are generally recognised as having better developed fieldwork skills than graduates from other universities.”

Dr Adam Paterson
Curator, South Australian Maritime Museum

“Many people consider space the final frontier, but they often forget the level to which we have already explored,” Dr Gorman said.
The process of space exploration has left a lot of debris behind, and while we bittersweetly call it space junk, Dr Gorman says we need to remember it is also the remnant of a pioneering history that began in the 1950s. “Vanguard 1, for example, is the oldest human object in orbit, launched in 1958 and still orbiting around the Earth, if we take it out, it loses that title and some of its significance,” Dr Gorman said.
“When you look at the key artefacts that have gone into orbit since then, you can make out our combined international history in space exploration.”

As technological capacity for space exploration advances, there are growing calls to clean up much of the space junk in Earth’s orbit, to avoid risks of collisions with the new wave of spacecraft and satellites. If and when humanity gets around to cleaning up some of its orbiting relics, Dr Gorman believes we need to be discriminating about what we remove. “I want to ensure we don’t take a blanket approach and pull everything out of space because some of those items are culturally historic, particularly when they are in space,” she said.
“I’m interested in space junk for the unique archaeological record of everything we have done in the space age; it tells us how we got into space, who was earliest, who sent the most, who has made it the farthest and how we have stayed up there.”

Working with the launch records from NASA, the former Soviet Union and the European Space Agency, Dr Gorman is aiming to create a map and historic record of the items’ locations, identifying items of particular cultural importance.
She hopes to be able to ensure that people ‘cross the world, including those from minor player nations, have something in space that identifies that they were a part of the exploration. The record also seeks to provide a useful prioritisation schedule for future plans to clean up space.”

MUSEUM IN SPACE

Ask most people what’s in space and they tend to respond with a set of fairly standard answers – ask Dr Alice Gorman, and her answer is “history”.

A WORD FROM ONE OF OUR GRADUATES

"I’m at a sustainable tourism conference in Norway and it is like I have heard this all before. This is all the stuff I learned at Flinders, and I didn’t realise until now how far ahead of the rest you are."

Kristen Helgerud
Tourism graduate
Travel Consultant, Australis Overseas

2016 SA Tourism Student of the Year

Specialising in festival and event design and management, Stephanie has been involved in the tourism industry for the past five years, working across a wide range of events including the Credit Union Christmas Pageant and Australia Day in the City Parade and Concert. She has also worked across local councils, government, not-for-profit and private sectors.

With a great passion for travel, Stephanie has become a seasoned traveller and visited Cambodia in September 2016 as part of a scholarship she was awarded. She is also a student ambassador at Flinders University and works with the Flinders University Student Association, demonstrating her dedicated engagement with the University and its students.

"The Bachelor of International Tourism helped prepare me for the tourism and events industry. I completed placements and projects in my desired field of work, as well as attending classes with lecturers who could provide real-world examples because they have experience working in tourism. Recently, I also had the opportunity to participate in a field trip to Cambodia, where I completed research along with my fellow students. As a result of my enthusiasm and commitment for working in tourism and events, I was awarded South Australian Tourism Student of the Year in 2016."

Stephanie Murgatroyd
Bachelor of International Tourism student and 2016 SA Tourism Student of the Year

In 2016, Flinders Bachelor of International Tourism student Stephanie Murgatroyd was awarded South Australian Tourism Student of the Year in the South Australian Tourism Awards.

A WORD FROM ONE OF OUR STUDENTS

“I wanted to study two languages as a part of one single degree and such a degree is only offered at Flinders. What I love about studying Italian and French at Flinders is that it’s not just the linguistic side of things – each semester there is a cultural component to the subjects.”

Cristina Anzich
Flinders Languages Student (French/Italian)

EXTENDED MAJORS, MAJORS

AND MINORS

The following languages can be taken as an extended major, major or minor:

French
French is spoken in more than 40 countries, including some of Australia’s closest neighbours, and is one of the most widely taught second languages in the world.

Indonesian
As Indonesia undergoes unprecedented change, studying the Indonesian language is a vital key to understanding our region.

Italian
Italy is one of the wealthiest nations in the world, an essential tourist destination, and a major trading partner with Australia. Italian language is a pathway to employment.

Modern Greek
The study of Modern Greek language and culture provides the key to understanding the importance of the Hellenic tradition in western intellectual development.

Spanish
Spanish is one of the three most widely spoken languages in the world, one of six official UN languages, and an important trading language in the Asia-Pacific.

Also available

The following languages are also available as a minor through cross-institutional study at the University of Adelaide:

• Chinese
• German
• Japanese.

GET MORE OUT OF YOUR DEGREE
Whatever you’re studying, Flinders gives you the opportunity to do more with your degree, giving you a competitive edge with a minimum of extra time spent studying.

Combined degrees
A combined degree is a combination of two Flinders bachelor degrees. As a combined degree graduate you will have two qualifications in just one to two-and-a-half years of study. Our combined degree programs are designed to enhance your educational, academic and professional qualifications while minimising the cost and length of your studies. Flinders combined degrees allow you to undertake in-depth study in exciting combinations that aren’t usually available in single degrees. Many graduates believe that a combined degree gives them an advantage for employment.

Bachelor of Letters
The Bachelor of Letters is available to study alongside any degree at Flinders and enables you to graduate with two qualifications. The Bachelor of Letters is available in the following disciplines:

- Creative writing
- Criminology (online)
- English
- French
- Health
- Indonesian
- Innovation and enterprise
- Italian
- Mathematics
- Modern Greek
- Spanish
- Sport performance coaching.

The Bachelor of Letters is normally undertaken part-time over three years to allow concurrent study with your primary bachelor degree, adding one year to your overall study program.
