Accounting and Finance

At Flinders University, we've not only watched a rapid evolution of the role accounting plays in our lives – we've helped engineer it.

With a strong focus on emerging financial technology, sustainability, and Indigenous impact, we're striving to shape a smart, skilled, and resilient future workforce of global leaders.

At Flinders, we're creating a future you can count on.

Why study a master's in accounting?

Much more than balancing books and paying bills on time, accounting and financial technology have become powerful tools, ensuring control, stability, and importantly, accountability for people and businesses across the globe.

If you have completed a non-accounting degree, completing a Master of Accounting will fulfil the requirements to commence a professional accounting degree.
