Overview

In my early career I worked in education as a classroom teacher (English, Maths and Science), curriculum consultant, faculty head and student counsellor in schools. For the past 24 years I have been involved in health systems development and research programmes with a focus on chronic illness management and self-management, Indigenous health, rural health and mental health. In these roles I led research programmes, managed health services and directed the Flinders University Centre for Gambling Research and the Flinders and Deakin University Departments of Rural Health.
